LECTURERS

Sabi Ardalan
Lecturer on Law; Assistant Director of the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic

Courses Trauma, Refugees and Asylum Law; Immigration and Refugee Advocacy Seminar (Spring); Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic (Spring)

Public Interest Legal Experience: Currently a clinical instructor and lecturer on law in the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic; prior to coming to HIRC, was an Equal Justice America fellow at the Opportunity Agenda for 2 years; as a litigation associate at Dewey Ballantine LLP, did a significant amount of pro bono immigration and asylum work; clerked in the Eastern District of New York and in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

Public Interest Legal Activities: Has applied for a number of fellowships and have been in contact with refugee organizations both in the U.S. and overseas as part of the Clinic; working at a nonprofit in NY, collaborated with a number of local immigration and refugee and workers' rights organizations, including community based groups, and am happy to discuss those with students

General suggestions and advice for students: I would urge students to do as many clinics as they can to figure out what kind of work they like best, and would encourage them to find summer jobs at organizations they might want to work at after graduation.
