Documentation

Documentation in support of a request for accommodation must be provided by a qualified professional who is licensed or otherwise properly credentialed and who possesses expertise in the area for which the accommodation is sought. Documentation must be from a treating professional, not from an individual with a personal relationship to the student (e.g., family member). Select examples of documentation that may be necessary to support a requested accommodation are listed below. For a more detailed description, please contact studentsupport@law.harvard.edu.

- Learning Disability: Psychoeducational or neuropsychological evaluation
- Attention Deficit Disorders: Psychoeducational or neuropsychological evaluation
- Hearing Impairments: Audiogram or Statement from Medical Provider form
- Visual Impairments: Acuity Report or Statement from Medical Provider form
- Physical Impairment: Letter from a treating practitioner or Statement from Medical Provider form
- Mental Health Condition: Letter from a treating practitioner or Statement from Medical Provider form
